

Lorain County BIG TREE Contest

Lorain County Conservation District is excited to announce the ninth annual Lorain County BIG TREE Contest! This voluntary contest will promote the beauty and benefits provided by our county's biggest and oldest trees. This year our featured tree species is the Weeping willow (Salix babylonica). Participants can nominate what they believe might be the largest weeping willow in Lorain county. Qualified personnel will verify the measurements of each nominated tree using the ODNR Division of Forestry's Big Tree Program procedures. Each tree will receive a score based on trunk circumference, crown spread, and total height to determine the winner.

The objectives of this contest are:

- To engage residents in the recognition, management, and enhancement of our county's tree populations.
- To showcase the critical roles that trees play in sustaining healthy soil and clean water.
- To recognize that each healthy tree in our county reduces flooding and improves water quality by soaking up storm water runoff and filtering out pollutants.

BIG TREE Contest Guidelines:

- Nominated trees must be located in Lorain County.
- Only one nomination per individual tree. The first nomination received will be entered into the contest.
- The tree does not have to be on the property of the nominator; however, permission from the landowner must be obtained prior to nomination. The owner of the tree will receive the contest prize.
- Nominations must be submitted to Lorain County Conservation District no later than Friday, July 26th – 4:30 p.m.
