WHAT IS STEWARDSHIP WEEK?

Stewardship Week, organized by the National Association of Conservation Districts (NACD) since 1955, is a national program promoting natural resource conservation. Held annually from the last Sunday in April to the first Sunday in May, it brings awareness to individual responsibilities towards safeguarding our natural resources.

The NACD Poster Contest, a part of this initiative, invites students from kindergarten through 12th grade to create artwork that aligns with the yearly stewardship theme, highlighting the work of conservation districts and their affiliated organizations in the protection of natural resources.

Winners start at the district level, progress to the state level, and ultimately receive recognition at NACD's annual meeting on the national stage.
